Description

Recorded on May 8, 1982, the second concert of the 4th annual New Sounds San Jose Festival featured Joan La Barbara presenting selections of music for voice, tape and electronics, most of which were her own compositions. Subtitled "Voice is the Original Instrument" the first half of this concert featured works where all the sound were created by the natural voice, amplified to bring out quiet sounds and particular qualities that would not be clearly audible without the use of amplification. While some of the pieces included multi-tracking, no electronic or tape manipulation was used and all one hears is either live or pre-recorded amplified voice. The second half of the concert included pieces by John Cage and Morton Subotnick, who is also La Barbara's husband. While some of these pieces include additional instrumentation such as ghost electronics the focus remains on the extraordinary vocal talents of La Barbara, whose impressive range and expression has made her one of the favorite vocalists for avant-garde classical composers. Upon listening to this recording there will be no doubt as to why that is so.
