Description

This program is the sixth in a new series of ambient field recordings from around the world. The original World Ear Project series was broadcast on KPFA in the early 1970s, as the portable cassette recorder first made such an ambitious undertaking economically affordable. In this, the second series, the idea of collecting sounds from unique and unusual environments from all over the world remains the same, however the advances in field recording technologies, including digital recording, make for a much higher quality experience. In this program Susan Stone, Charles Amirkhanian, Richard Friedman, and Melanie Walker present tapes recorded in Philadelphia, California, Egypt, Borneo, and other locations.

Musical Selections

[walk in the woods in Mundraching, Germany with Stephan Micus, part 2] / Charles Amirkhanian -- [walk through the Exploratorium, San Francisco, California] / Melanie Walker -- [cicadas at sunset in Borneo, Indonesia] / Tom Sloan -- [waterfall in Sequoia National Park, California, June 1985] / Ty Allison -- [a toy "rock-a-bye bear" with sounds of the womb] / Susan Stone
